About Housing Resources Service (HRS)

Extensive consultations with communities and housing managers have enabled HRS to map the framework for an on-reserve housing support organization that addresses the specific capacity building challenges of southern interior First Nations. Taking shape is an organization that is:

- Membership driven
- Desirous of achieving financial sustainability within five years
- Committed to providing access to services for all communities regardless of size, remoteness, or financial strength
- Free of political influence
- Flexible, adjusting the mix of services to match the expressed needs of members
- A channel for sharing, which is our foundational value.

Guiding the work of the HRS will be five principles:

1

Respect the jurisdiction of the tribal groups

2

Ensure funding for HRS does not affect funding for First Nations' housing

3

Client-centered service delivery

4

Transportable model for other regions of BC and Canada

5

Collaboration with partners relevant to the Nations of the HRS service area.

It's easy and free to become a member.

Here are just a few benefits of membership:

- Early notification of all Workshops, Forums, and Information Sessions
- Access to the members-only web portal, which allows Members to access the central repository of housing information provided by the HRS Members including:
 - Planning and Governance includes documents and proven practices that support housing Leadership, departments, and committees with effective planning and implementation of housing projects.
 - Funding and Financing includes the budgeting, funding, and financing of new builds, renovations housing projects, and guidelines on accessing funding for housing projects.
- Construction and Renovation includes the design, pre-construction, procurement, construction and building, commissioning, owner occupancy and project close-out as well as the process of improving a broken, damaged, or outdated building.
- Administration and Tenant Relations includes the administration of your housing project such as policies, templates, job descriptions, asset management and tenant relations.
